

death a tremendous blow—the wolf avoided it. It tumbled in the snow, and in a few moments was gone behind.

The distance from home was now quickly shortening beneath the horse's hoofs, which continued to carry the sledge at full gallop, till the fear of an overturn became the source of fresh anxiety. Mart was quite aware by this time that these were no common busy wolves he had to deal with, but sharp set determined brutes, to whom man or beast would be alike welcome. These were not the animals to be deterred by the sight of man's dwelling, as is usually the case, and there was a large verger of wide open space between the outskirts of the forest and his home, which he looked to with unalloyed apprehension.

"They were now at the very edge of the wood—the road became open—the wolves gained on every side—the horse bounded furiously forward, caught the sledge against the stump of a tree—it overturned—was swept away at a tremendous pace, and Mart was left alone in the snow. In a moment a heavy claw had slit the throat and down the front of his sheepskin—it was well! Anno's whippers lay so thick beneath. He threw off the brute and rose—his hatchet had been jerked out of his hand in the fall—he cast a desperate glance around, but saw it not. The horse was now almost out of sight, two of the wolves were close to the helpless man, and the two others, describing the animal, were bounding back to him. Mart fired the foremost, he could do no more, and in an instant was surrounded.

"Here we must leave him, however cruel it may seem. Meanwhile the two women were as usual expecting him anxiously at home—Mart was late. Anno was sitting beneath the pine-wood candle at the spinning wheel. Lisa had risen from her seat and gone into the smaller chamber, especially devoted to her. Old Karria Pals was lying before the stove fast asleep. Of a sudden the dog pricked up his ears, listened, rose—ran to the door and whined—then, returned to Anno, wagged his tail, ran back, and whining again, scratched at the door. Karria Pals usually gave signal of Mart's approach though not in so urgent a way, and Anno opened the door expecting to see her husband. The dog dashed furiously out, but no sign of Mart appeared. The young wife went out into the piercing air—saw and heard nothing, and was slowly turning in, when a sound caught her ear—it was the sound of hoofs striking full and sharp upon the ground.

So Mart never approached before that there was nothing for wonder, for the next moment the horse galloped up to the door and stopped. Anno saw instantly that something had happened—the animal was dripping with the foam and rumbling all over—the sledge was reversed, and, above all, Mart was not there.

"Anno was but the girl still; she called quick grandmother—the old woman did not answer—the inner room; Lisa was standing motionless with her face turned to the door. There was no light save from the little snowed-up window; but Anno saw enough to know that she stood in prayer. "Oh Jummell! (God) said the poor girl to herself, hear her and leaving her undisturbed, she ran again out of the house, gave one look at the trembling horse and then all trembling herself, began to retrace the jagged track in which it had come.

"We must now return to Mart, whom we have left in a frightful position. He knew what it was to put forth his strength in games and wrestling matches, and it was such a shoulder to shoulder and muscle to muscle, few could withstand. But it was nothing now against the heavy weight—the vice like teeth; the rending grasp that held him down on every side. For a few seconds the desperate voice of a man to whom life is sweet, and such a death so terrible, shook off the pitiless assailants; but his own blood had dyed the snow and the sight of it seemed to turn ferociously in fury. The blood hounds leaped again upon him, they pulled him down.

"People say there is no time to think in sudden dangers—they have never known one. There are more thoughts struck from the mind in one moment's collision with sudden and desperate peril than in days of fearless security. The sweat of this earth—the home that lay so near—the mystery of Heaven, swept over poor Mart's mind; nay, even particulars found time to intrude. He thought how Anno and Lisa would watch through the night—how his mangled remains would tell all in the morning—Anno's despair—the village lament; he thought of all this and more, and knew himself in the jaws of hungry wolves! Then these foul furies glared over him the tightening of the throat followed, and he thought it was over. Still he struggled to release his arms—the grasp on the throat was so focusing him—his senses reeled—when on a sudden—dash came another animal—hard-breathing along, threw itself into the midst with one sharp howl, and fastened upon the chief assailant. The wolves relaxed their fury for an instant; Mart reeled giddily to his feet, and recognized his brave dog. For a second he stood stunned and bewildered; when he saw one wolf retreating, and all three attacking the dauntless Karria Pals. He turned to help him, and a bright object caught his eye; it was his hatchet lying on the snow within arm's length of his last struggle—Mart snatched it up, and was now himself again. Blood was dripping from him, but his limbs were uninjured, and furies were the strokes he dealt.

"One wolf soon lay dead at his feet; the other cowered, and retreated, spilling its blood as it went, and held off, skulking round; now Mart panted his whole fury on the great monster, which held Karria Pals in as striding a grasp as he had done his master. It was no easy task to release the dog. The hatchet rang on the wolf's skull, rattled on his ribs, and laid bare the gnawed back-bone; but the dog's own body interrupted any mortal wound, and the wolf seemed to feel no other. Poor Karria Pals's case was desperate; his legs were all drawn together, protecting the very parts he sought to wound, when suddenly he snatched himself out with some fresh agony, and the hatchet was cut deep in the wolf's throat. Many more fierce strokes were needed before life was extinct; and as Mart rose, a hand on his shoulder arrested him, and his wife fell into his bosom.

ARRIVAL OF THE AMERICA.
New York, July 9.—The Washington, from Bremen, is below Hellifax.

The America arrived with dates to the 24th.

News was received that the Turks have beaten the Russians, forcing them to retreat across the Danube, and to raise siege Silistria.

The Turks on the 15th sailed out of Silistria and attacked the Russians in trenches; a severe battle took place, ending in the total discomfiture of the Russians, who were pursued by the Turks and fled across the Danube and destroyed the Russian siege works. It is considered this victory will change the face of the campaign. A conspiracy to assassinate Napoleon was discovered in the south of France; a hundred and fifty arrests were made.

The papers announced on the 17th ult., that Paskievitch received orders from St. Petersburg to retire.

The Paris Monitor announces on the 13th of June that the Turks made a tremendous sortie from Silistria, attacked the Russians with great fury. Gen. Schellere received a wound rendering amputation of the left leg necessary.

Prince Gortschakoff received a contusion.

The Russians had sprung three mines before Silistria without damage, and were prepared to mount the expected breach when they were attacked on three sides by the Turks. A fearful slaughter ensued. The Russians fled. The Turkish brigade from Shumla, succeeded in entering Silistria on the 13th.

The Russians were employed in burying the dead on the 14th and 15th.

Three Russian Generals were wounded. The garrison of Ratschuk went over to the island of Mokay and destroyed all the Russian works there.

General Grotenhielm's division said to have defeated two Turkish brigades with 6,000 cavalry and 40 guns.

The Turks have driven the Russians from Turtukri, which they occupied with a strong garrison.

General Ludes was amongst the wounded at Silistria.

It is said there is much disunion exists among the Russian Generals at headquarters; probably induced by the ill success.

Austria's summons, that Russia should evacuate the principalities, had caused the utmost irritation at St. Petersburg. The answer is under discussion. Prince Paskievitch, who was on the road to Jassy, was ordered to return and take Silistria at any cost.

We have advices from Turin to the 15th—Judge Gabby, who was charged with assassination of the Duke of Parma, who was mortally wounded with a poignard in the streets of Parma, on the 12th of June.

We have advices from Madrid to June the 15th. Gen. Orlando and Messina were arrested on charge of harboring Gen. O'Connell. Messina escaped; Orlando was sent to Galico; the despatches from Vienna state that the convention was concluded at Constantinople between Austria and the Porte relative to the Danubian principalities, the conditions being that Russia voluntarily retires.

Austrian troops will enter the principalities and form a defense between Russia and Turkey. If Russia refuses to retire, Austria will take such steps as appear necessary to insure her doing so.

The Russians were surprised and beaten by the Circassians at Baric Pass.

The death of Mussa Pach of Silistria, is confirmed.

The latest telegraphic despatch states that at the conference at Tresechin it was decided that Prussia would not formally declare war against Russia, but would place a portion of the Prussian army under the orders of the Emperor of Austria.

Gen. Damendarry succeeded the chief command of the Russian forces on the Danube, in consequence of the wounds received by Gen. Ludes, who had his jaw carried away by a cannon ball.

At telegraphic dispatch says the English fleet numbers upwards of forty vessels was signaled off Constantinople at Silistria.

Gortschakoff was severely wounded. General Schellere and his leg shot off, and two other Generals were killed. The carriage containing the Russian was dented, and they retired fighting across the Danube. Pursuing their advantage, the Turks crossed an arm of the river, seized the Isle of Hops and blew up the Russian siege works thereon. The Turks then erected temporary batteries on the Hungarian bank of the river, before the north face of the fortress. The Russian batteries, east and west of Silistria, immediately returned in good order across the river, destroying their bridges.

This victory was gained entirely by the Turks.

The Russians at latest dates were in the vicinity of Kalarof, waiting reinforcements and orders.

The whole plan of operations at Bulgrin must now be altered.

It is surmised that Paskievitch will order the whole of the Russian force to fall back on Jassy.

Ere this the Russians probably have relinquished all positions on the left bank of the Danube excepting fort.

At Korova, Malechin and Usakinscha apprehension of the advance of the Russians for the present is at an end.

Russians accounts from Bulharist admit the suspension of operations against Silistria, but say the siege has not been finally raised.

The Russians have evacuated Mogueili and Sinnagi.

Five thousand Turks have occupied Turukit.

It is reported, but doubted, that the garrison at Ratschuk had crossed to Osimago, killed 400 Russians and taken 9 guns.

Admirals Dundas and Hamelen issued a circular announcing the close by blockade of the mouth of the mouth of the Danube.

Most of the fleet are retreating on Schanpel, and six or eight ships are at Varna.

The English ships Ohio and Vulture landed 150 men at Kalyon.

Karleny was attacked by the Russians, and they were driven back to their ships with a loss of 3 officers 3 seamen killed 2 officers and 14 seamen wounded, and 25 taken prisoners.

Admiral Napier sent four ships against Karleny. All the Russian pilots were sent into the interior.

The British, under Admiral Plunridge, have taken formal possession of Fornece, unopposed.

Greece.—We have advices from Muscogit in June 14th. The insurrectionists totally extinct at Epauris, but the Turkish troops were marching to Uhearsly, where the insurrectionists refuse to submit.

The U. S. ships Cumberland and Saranac were at Pioras.

A report is current that Russia had again made overtures through Austria; but the terms are said to be the immediate retirement of the allies from Turkey, which can scarcely be regarded as true.

A rumor is again afloat in the English papers that the Czar will abdicate. An is also reported to be sick, and for that alleged reason did not attend the cabinet council on the 19th.

In case on evasive answer comes from Russia Austria will forward its final ultimatum, demanding a categorical answer within eight days.

It is stated that Napoleon intimated to the Austrian government that the French will interfere and suppress any revolutionary movements in Hungary or Italy while the Austrian troops were engaged against the Russians. Similar declarations are expected from England.

The Russian loan of 16,000,000 roubles, five per cent, is negotiating at Hamburg at 87.

General Intelligence.

A dispatch from Vienna asserts positively that Russia has out of high respect and consideration for Austria, consented to vacate the Principalities, and was withdrawing all the forces beyond the Pruth.

Lord John Russell officially announced in the British Parliament that the siege of Silistria had been raised, and that the advance guard of the French and English had reached Pravale, and Omar Pasha was advancing with his whole force to the Danube.

From the Baltic and Black Sea, or Asia, no news had been received for a week.

The Greek insurrection had been totally quelled.

The minor German States accept the Austro-Prussian note.

Brazil had notified France and England of her neutrality.

To Miss Anne's Verse.

Mist! I lose thee? wilt thou leave me? Leave this heart to break alone, With thou then so soon deceive me And weep a heart that's all thy own.

Oh! no dear girl a spell has bound me In vain I seek to break the chain, For memory clinging still around me Brings thy dear image back again.

Mist! these eyes no more behold thee, As they did when late we met? Mist! this heart then cease to hold thee? Mist! I learn then to forget?

Forget! ah! no! in vain I vain, I may try those ties to sever, Those of thine so full of pain Have bade me part forever.

Stamping Ground, July 8th.

For the Herald.
Mr. FARMER:
Dear Sir:—In your excellent paper of the 6th inst., you unintentionally, however, gave the credit of refreshments furnished the "Georgetown Guards," on the 4th inst., at the Georgetown Hotel, to Messrs. Jones & Barkley and at Mr. Pullen's to the proprietor. Such was not the case; those clever gentlemen, Messrs. Hastings and McClure of the Hotel, kindly furnished us with refreshments, at the Hotel Messrs. Fitzgerald, Sr., and Ashurst heartily supplied us with refreshments on the occasion. "Honor to whom honor is due!"

Messrs. Hastings and McClure, of the Hotel; also, Messrs. Fitzgerald and Ashurst, will please accept our thanks which are hereby tendered, for favors on the 4th. And last, though, not least we are under renewed obligations to yourself for the very flattering notice you have taken of us since our organization.

Our thanks are due to the citizens generally, for their liberality, extended toward us.

Respectfully yours,
A. GUARD.

SENSELESS.—A worthy clergyman in Yorkshire, England, lately deceased, bequeathed in his will a considerable property to his only daughter, on the subsequent conditions.—First, that she did not enter into the state of matrimony without the consent of his two executors, or their representatives. Secondly, that she dressed with greater decency than she had hitherto been accustomed to do.—The testator's words were: "But my daughter Ann—hath not attended to my admonitions, respecting the filthy and lewd custom of dressing with naked elbows, my will is, that in case she persists so gross a violation of female decency, the whole property devised by means aforesaid, and intended as a provision for her future life, shall go to the eldest son of my sister, Caroline—and his heirs lawfully begotten. To those who may say this restriction is severe, I answer, that an indecent display of personal ornaments in women is a certain indication of intellectual depravity."

ELECTION TICKETS.
The enemy candidates would consult their own interests, by giving their orders at an early day, for election tickets. A general ticket is liable, to the objection that every man's name cannot go first; whereas every individual ordering tickets, may have the names of the various candidates for the county placed in the order that suits him best. First come first served, we shall prepare a ticket from the names listed in our columns, which we will furnish to candidates who have been announced in our columns at the rate of $1 per hundred and 75 cents for each additional hundred; those who have not been announced in our columns will be charged $2.00 for the first hundred and $1 for each subsequent hundred. Send in your orders early, gentlemen, if you do not wish to be delayed or disappointed. As defeated candidates are so very forgetful after the election, and as a large number of the candidates must inevitably be defeated, the cash must accompany all orders for tickets to ensure their being printed.

TAKE NOTICE.
The owners of the following jobs are requested to call at the captain's office and settle for the same, or their executors and jobs will be advertised and sold on behalf of whom it may concern.

1. A lot of "Books & Stationary" labels, printed for a gentleman who has negotiated from these diggings to parts unknown, about the size of Postcard—Price $10.

Also, a lot of "contract" blanks, printed for a gentleman of the vicinity, price $2.50.

Also A. G. of Robinson Jones' Post office would do well to forward the cash for certain cards printed and delivered on a positive promise, which promise has never been complied with.

This, we presume, will do for a commencement; let us have a few more of the same sort of delinquencies, to which we will pay double for the same, as opportunity offers, and necessity requires, unless, taking the hint, our delinquent patrons call at the captain's office and settle.
